

Ledgerly Inc. — Equipment & Hardware Expense Policy

Effective 2026-01-01 · IT & Finance Departments · Applies to all employees

1. Standard equipment

New employees receive a laptop and monitor issued directly by IT; these are not expensed by the employee. Peripherals such as keyboards, mice, and headsets up to 1500 TRY may be self-purchased and expensed once per 24 months.

Replacement equipment due to loss or damage caused by employee negligence is not reimbursable and is instead billed back through payroll deduction per the separate Asset Loss Policy.

2. Home office setup

Fully remote employees may expense a one-time home office setup, including a desk and chair, up to a combined 8000 TRY, submitted within the first 90 days of a remote offer becoming effective.

Monthly internet or utility reimbursements for home offices are not covered under this policy; see the Remote Work Stipend policy for that benefit.

3. Software and SaaS purchases

Individual software licenses under 2000 TRY per year may be self-purchased with manager approval logged in the expense notes. Any recurring SaaS subscription above that threshold must be requisitioned through IT Procurement rather than expensed directly.

Purchases of AI or LLM API credits for personal experimentation outside an approved project are not reimbursable.

4. Approval and documentation

All equipment and hardware expenses require an itemized receipt showing the vendor, item description, and unit price; a card statement alone is not sufficient documentation.

Any single hardware purchase exceeding 6000 TRY requires prior written approval from both the requesting employee's manager and IT.
